Research Summary

I study how products evolve and how they draw on scientific knowledge. I reconstruct product lineages to trace how technical capabilities emerge, persist, and spread across product families. By linking products to patents and research papers, I examine how atypical research is cited in science and technology and whether similar patterns of knowledge assembly recur across industries. I also use historical records to study how legal and regulatory systems evolve over time.

Research Interests & Methods

Research Interests: computational social science; science of science; complex systems; innovation; networks; technology/product evolution

Methods: network analysis; evolutionary/phylogenetic modeling; text mining & NLP; representation learning/embeddings; statistical modeling

Computational Skills: Python; PyTorch; R; Git; LaTeX; CosmoGraph (visualization)

Professional Appointments

The University of Chicago, Chicago, IL, USA — Sep 2025 – Present
Postdoctoral Scholar, Knowledge Lab, Department of Sociology
Advisor: James Evans

Northwestern University, Evanston, IL, USA — Sep 2024 – Aug 2025
Postdoctoral Fellow, Management & Organization, Kellogg School of Management
(Affiliated with the Northwestern Institute on Complex Systems)
Advisor: Hyejin Youn

Seoul National University, Seoul, Korea — Mar 2024 – Aug 2024
Postdoctoral Fellow, Engineering Research Institute
Advisor: Jeong-Dong Lee

Ulsan National Institute of Science and Technology (UNIST), Ulsan, Korea — Feb 2024 – Feb 2025
Adjunct Professor (part-time; concurrent appointment)

Education

Ph.D. in Engineering — Mar 2020 – Feb 2024
Seoul National University, Seoul, Korea
Dissertation: "A Study on Generalized Evolutionary Patterns of Product: Learning on Mobile Product Phylogenetic Network"
Committee: Jeong-Dong Lee, Jongsu Lee, Donghyun Oh, Junghye Lee, Yoonmo Koo

M.S. in Engineering — Mar 2018 – Feb 2020
Seoul National University, Seoul, Korea

B.S. in Physics — Feb 2009 – Aug 2016
Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (KAIST), Daejeon, Korea
